Article I – Bill of Rights

Be it resolved by the people of the State of Missouri that the Constitution be amended:

Article I, Constitution of Missouri, is amended by adding one new section, to be known as section 36, to read as follows:

In order to assert our rights, acknowledge our duties, and proclaim the principles on which our government is founded, we declare:

Section 36. 1. That every parent has a fundamental right to exercise exclusive control over all aspects of their minor children's lives without governmental interference, including, but not limited to, decisions regarding their minor children's custody, upbringing, education, religious instruction, discipline, physical and mental health care, and place of habitation; provided, this fundamental right shall not extend to any decision or action by a parent that threatens clear, immediate, and substantial physical injury to their minor child, nor shall it permit a parent to compel a minor child to have an abortion.

2. That every parent also has the right to require government entities to obtain the parent's explicit permission before gathering or sharing information or data about their child or the child's family members for purposes not directly related to a criminal investigation or, if enrolled in a public school, the child's knowledge of academic subjects; neither the parent nor child shall in any way be punished or penalized if the parent refuses such permission.

3. That every parent has the right to decide what educational setting will best prepare their children to meet the obligations of responsible adulthood, and therefore parents may choose to have their children educated in public, private, or parochial schools or to educate their children at home as an alternative to enrolling the children in any school; provided, nothing in this section shall require or prohibit any state or local government to fund or subsidize education in a non-public school setting or, unless otherwise required by law, require a public school to enroll or educate a child who does not live in that public school's district.

4. That a government entity in this state shall only be justified in interfering with the parental rights acknowledged in this section if (1) the interference is temporary and limited to only the degree and duration necessary to protect a child from a clear, immediate and substantial threat of physical injury; (2) a court of law has found by clear and convincing evidence that a parent has knowingly exposed a child to neglect, abandonment, reckless endangerment, or physical abuse, as each of those terms are defined by state statute; (3) a court of law has found by clear and convincing evidence that a parent is mentally incompetent as that term is defined by state statute; (4) a court of law has ruled that minor child is emancipated in accordance with state statutes; (5) a court of law has assumed jurisdiction over a minor child charged with violating or found beyond a reasonable doubt to have violated a criminal statute; or (6) a court of law has assigned parental rights to one parent or someone other than a biological parent as a result of adoption or marital dissolution. If, after considering evidence, a judge has first determined that a government entity has probable cause to believe that a parent has subjected their child to criminal physical abuse, neglect, or endangerment, it shall not be considered an interference with the parental rights acknowledged in this section for the government entity to question the parent or the child about the alleged crime, or for police to obtain a warrant to search the parent's home for evidence of the suspected crime.

5. That any parent whose rights under this section have been adversely affected by any statute, regulation, ordinance, policy, or other act of government authority shall be permitted to file a lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of the statute, regulation, ordinance, policy, or other act of government authority, and seeking damages against the government entity responsible for the violation of the parent's rights. In considering such a lawsuit, courts may not presume the constitutionality of the statute, regulation, ordinance, policy, or other act of government authority being challenged, may not defer to claims made by a government entity that the statute, regulation, ordinance, policy, or other act of government authority is justified unless the government entity supports all such claims with competent evidence, and shall award damages and reasonable attorney's fees for any infringement of this constitutional right that is not justified in accordance with subsection 4 of this section.

6. For the purposes of this section the term "parent" includes a child's legal guardian.
