FEB 27 1933

The first part of the document discusses the general situation of the country and the progress of the war. It mentions the importance of maintaining the morale of the people and the need for unity and cooperation among all citizens. The government is committed to fighting the war to the end and to achieving a complete and final victory.

In the second part, the government outlines its policy towards the enemy. It states that the enemy's actions are a direct challenge to the freedom and independence of the nation. The government will not negotiate with the enemy and will continue to fight until the enemy is completely defeated.

The third part of the document focuses on the economic situation. It notes that the war has caused significant economic difficulties, but the government is confident that it can overcome these challenges through the implementation of various economic measures. It emphasizes the need for the population to conserve resources and support the war effort.

Finally, the document concludes with a call to action for all citizens. It urges everyone to do their part in the war effort, whether through military service, industrial production, or other means. The government promises to continue to work for the well-being of the people and to ensure a bright future for the nation.
