HISTORICAL NOTES

1828-1907

Missouri Governor John Miller issued an address to the Senate on November 18, 1828. In this address, he mentioned the need for state library. Said Miller: "the establishment of a State library, is an object in which the state, to my mind, is also deeply interested. From an extensive and well selected library, to which members of the legislature and officers of the government generally, could have access, the most happy influence over the business of legislation and the general affairs of government might be expected.” (Journal of the Senate of the State of Missouri at the First Session of the Fifth General Assembly, 1828, p. 15) Shortly thereafter on January 23, 1829 an act to regulate the State Library was passed by the General Assembly.

The State Library had relatively humble beginnings. It was to be the duty of the Secretary of State to maintain the Library and make sure that it included three bound copies of the Laws of Missouri passed in every session of the General Assembly as well as those passed by Congress. The only patrons were to be members of the General Assembly, the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State, Attorney General of the State and the U.S., Auditor, Treasurer, Circuit Court judges, U.S. judges, and State and U.S. Supreme Court judges. The General Assembly paid for the purchase of books and for the salary of the State Librarian. Its book budget in 1831 was $150.

On March 5, 1855 the General Assembly passed an act for the regulation and management of the State Library. Section one declared that the Clerk of the Supreme Court shall be the ex-officio State Librarian. He was to keep all the books, and the Missouri Secretary of State was still to deliver to the Librarian three bound copies of official publications made by Congress and the General Assembly. In addition, the Library would now maintain law books, Supreme Court decisions and case files, maps, and other governmental records.

The Library's holdings in the Capitol Building were outgrowing its present space, so in 1877 the General Assembly passed an act allowing for the erection of a new state government building that would house the Missouri Supreme Court, the State Library, and the Attorney General. Until the 1875 Constitution, the Supreme Court had been a traveling circuit. The new Constitution placed it in the permanent seat of state government in Jefferson City. A site was constructed east of the Capitol where the current Department of Transportation is.

On March 25, 1905 the General Assembly voted again to get a new building for the Supreme Court. It appropriated money with an emergency clause that it go into effect immediately. The act included a provision to make a fire-proof vault for the Library's holdings. The building opened in 1907. Both moves proved providential when the Capitol Building was struck by lightning in 1911 and burned. Had the Library's holdings still been inside the Capitol, historians today may not otherwise have had access to the early Supreme Court case files and other records moved with the Library.

1907-1945

When the new Supreme Court building opened in 1907, the General Assembly readdressed the need for public state library services. The physical library that was in the Supreme Court building was still intended just for state employees associated with state government and elected officials. There was no official public state library.

After a few failed earlier attempts, on March 20, 1907 the General Assembly established the State Library Commission with SB232. Two days later HB391 re-worked the mission of the old

State Library. It would now be “a medium for exchange of the official publications of the various departments...of state government.” (1907 Laws of Missouri p. 356)

On April 7, 1909 the General Assembly Library was established. It would be for the exclusive use of members of the General Assembly and would be under the control of the House and Senate. By now the State was paying to maintain many different library bodies: the General Assembly Library, the Supreme Court/State Library, the new Library Commission, as well as school and higher education libraries.

The new State Library Commission’s duties were to give advice to all school and public libraries as to the best means of establishing and maintaining them and to circulate books within the state to communities, schools and individuals otherwise without free book service. The Commission consisted of three people appointed by the Governor, the State Superintendent of Schools, and the President of State University. The group met in the Capitol Annex that formerly housed the Supreme Court.

The Commission was quick to establish 50 so-called “traveling libraries” that would circulate roughly 4,000 volumes of general literature and reference materials to the public. They also gathered statistics on public libraries throughout the state. During World War I, the Library Commission was tasked with carrying out Missouri’s part in the Library War Service of the American Library Association. This meant that the Commission advertised for donations of books and magazines to be later distributed to troops in training and overseas.

The Commission’s next big task was to advocate for the creation of county libraries in Missouri. The early 1900s had seen a burst of public libraries being built thanks to the Carnegie Library movement. Missouri’s first Carnegie Library was granted in 1899 in Sedalia, MO. By 1917 there were 33 Carnegie Libraries in Missouri. However, there was still an astounding lack of public libraries in the State.

The Commission pushed for county libraries, and finally in 1921 the General Assembly approved HB383, an act providing for establishing county library districts and maintaining free county libraries. Tax payers had to petition the county court asking for the creation of a county library district and for a county tax to be established for the library itself. It took almost ten years before the first county library was established, however.

The Commission faced an uphill battle with the Legislature for appropriations. This was never more apparent than in 1933 when House Bill 5 was introduced which proposed to abolish the State Library Commission. The bill failed.

1946-present

With SB369 in 1946, the Missouri State Library was created and replaced the State Library Commission. The new Library’s mission was three-fold: 1) to serve as a clearing house on library professional problems and furnish information as to the best means of establishing and maintaining libraries, 2) to furnish library service to public and school libraries, institutions and state departments, and to all communities which may propose to establish libraries, and 3) to administer state grants and encourage local appropriations.

The State Library would be organized under the Division of Higher Education within the State Department of Education. When the State Omnibus Reorganization Act of 1974 was passed, higher education was separated from elementary education. With that, the State Library was moved under the auspices of the new Coordinating Board for Higher Education (CBHE).

Three years later in 1977, the Wolfner Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped was moved under the Missouri State Library. Prior to 1977, Wolfner had been operated by the St. Louis Public Library. Wolfner's mission is to provide informational and recreational materials in Braille and audio formats free of charge to Missourians who are unable to use standard print materials due to blindness, visual or physical impairment, or a reading disability.

Today, the Wolfner Talking Book and Braille Library is a member of a national network of cooperating libraries that provides free library services to those unable to read standard print materials. The network was established in 1931 by the National Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped (NLS) of the Library of Congress, with Wolfner Library as one of the original 19 libraries. Wolfner continues to play a leading role in that national network, now consisting of 56 regional libraries. The Library circulates over a half million items to more than 10,000 individual Missourians and close to 2,000 institutions yearly.

In 1993, the Missouri State Library moved under the auspices of the Secretary of State's Office where it remains today. Under Secretary Cook in 1996 the Library was reorganized into three divisions: 1) Wolfner Library, 2) Library Development, and 3) Reference Services.

The in-house holdings of the Library are available for browsing and check-out by Missouri state employees. The Library publishes a daily collection of newspaper stories concerning Missouri government from major papers around the state called "Keeping Up." Finally, the MoDOT Transportation Library maintains an employee part-time in the State Library to handle the transportation-related materials. Its mission remains much the same as it was in 1946.

MO SOS: MISSOURI STATE LIBRARY STATE DOCUMENTS Annual Reports, 1901-2002

Extent: Incomplete

Arrangement: Chronological

Scope and Content

Early annual reports list the budget of the State Library and what books and other items have been purchased in the previous fiscal year. Some reports also include maps of locations of public libraries in Missouri; lists of traveling libraries; usage statistics, etc. Photographs are sometimes included, especially from 1908-1916, 1927-1929, 1933, 1936-1938, 1954/55-1955/56 & 1990-1991.

Reports of the State Librarian as early as 1866 can be found in the House & Senate Journal Appendices published by the MO General Assembly. The Journals can be found online for free from 1820-1899 on Missouri Digital Heritage here:

MO SOS: MISSOURI STATE LIBRARY STATE DOCUMENTS

Missouri Census Data Center Newsletters, 1981-2002

Extent: Incomplete

Arrangement: Chronological

Scope and Content

Missouri Census Update was begun in 1997, four years after the Missouri State Library came under the auspices of the Secretary of State. From its first issue: “Missouri Census Update is published quarterly by the Office of the Secretary of State to fulfill contractual obligations to the U.S. Bureau of the Census in connection with the State Data Center Program authorized under Title 13, United States Code, Section 8(b). The newsletter is distributed to the Census Bureau, other state data centers, affiliate agencies, libraries, universities, state agencies, and other interested parties.”

NEWS... is possibly a press release, but as the Archives only has one issue it is difficult to ascertain its original purpose. The 1982 issue speaks of census data. The Missouri State Library newsletter seems to have been a one-time publication. It is the size of a newspaper page and contains summary information on the previous year 1996. Possibly this served as the 1996 annual report.

Newsline is published by the Library Development Division of the State Library. It is a monthly newsletter that prints information on current programs and grants run by the Library. It also includes job advertisements for the State Library. Finally, Newsline took submissions from libraries around the state for its "Missouri Library News" and "Personal Notes" sections. An e-publication called Newsline Extra was distributed via e-mail and included the latest information about grant opportunities, workshops, and other time-sensitive events.

MO SOS: MISSOURI STATE LIBRARY STATE DOCUMENTS

State Library Periodicals, 1949-1998

Extent: Incomplete

Arrangement: Chronological

Scope and Content

Show-Me Libraries was begun as a small monthly periodical. It contains information on the Library's activities and outreach programs; essays on public libraries; information on newly-opened libraries in the state, and more. In 1988 it became a quarterly periodical and librarians outside of the State Library could submit articles for publication.

Missouri Library World replaced Show-Me Libraries as the State Library's periodical. Library World is complimentary to Missouri public, academic, and special libraries, library trustees, state agencies, ALA-accredited library schools, and state libraries. The magazine includes stories from outside contributors about current library events and topics.

Newspaper Reports, aka "Keeping Up," 1973-1985

Extent: Incomplete

Arrangement: Chronological

Scope and Content

This collection is RESTRICTED. The books contain reprints of newspaper articles from around the state concerning state business/government. Users of this collection do NOT have permission to reproduce these articles because copyright remains with the newspapers themselves. However, users may look at these records. Generally, these articles were distributed to state employees only.

Later issues of this publication were re-named "Keeping Up." Additional articles are on microfiche in the microfilm room and are organized by topic.

WOLFNER: A HISTORY

Quoted from Missouri State Library: A Profile pp. 16-17

“In 1924, the St. Louis Public Library created a Department for the Blind that offered braille books for the use of St. Louis residents. The department was an independent organization organized at the request of the St. Louis Society for the Blind.

“The Pratt-Smoot bill, signed by President Hoover in 1931, authorized and funded a national program of free library service for adult blind readers, and in this same year the Library of Congress designated the St. Louis Public Library as one of 18 regional facilities to provide the special service.

“Cramped quarters and increased demand for services necessitated construction of a separate building to house the braille collection. The Henry L. Wolfner Memorial Library for the Blind was dedicated in 1938. Named for a prominent St. Louis eye doctor, the library was the first branch building financed by a group of citizens. The branch served as both library and social center for the blind.

“The federal government extended library service to blind children in 1952 and to the physically handicapped in 1966. Wolfner’s title was changed in 1968 to reflect this extension of service. The library moved to a new location in St. Louis in 1971.

“The State of Missouri began reimbursing the St. Louis Public Library for Wolfner’s services in 1963, and on July 1, 1977 the State Library assumed direct administration of the Wolfner Memorial Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped.

“Wolfner serves Missouri residents who are unable to use conventional reading materials.”
