Historical and Biographical Notes

Leroy Korschgen was born in Kahoka, Missouri to parents Edward and Mary Schmid Korschgen. He graduated from St. Patrick High School and enrolled in the University of Missouri in the Agricultural program and graduated with a B.S. in Agriculture in 1940. For his master's degree, Korschgen entered the Wildlife Department and started work on his thesis on the feeding habits of quail. However, his work was interrupted by a call from the U.S. Army.

From 1942 to 1946, Korschgen served in World War II, traveling to different posts in the United States, Philippines, and New Guinea. When he returned from serving in the Army, he married Bernice Schmitz, with whom he'd been carrying on a long-distance relationship. They moved to Columbia, Missouri, and he received his Master's degree in Wildlife Conservation from the University of Missouri the same year. He was also hired by the Missouri Department of Conservation as a Technician.

By 1951, he and fellow biologist Allen Brohn had developed a groundbreaking Precipitin test. This test differentiated the blood and meat of deer from other animals, and was admissible in court. Korschgen's testimony in court was essential for many poaching cases. In 1971, he received the E. Sydney Stephens Award from the Missouri Chapter of The Wildlife Society. He received the Wildlife Conservation Award from the Conservation Federation of Missouri in 1973.

His work played another vital role when he found that the pesticides aldrin and dieldrin could be harmful to wildlife. His testimony about his research findings helped lead to the ban of these chemicals in 1974. At the Department of Conservation, he continued to study the feeding habits of various animals, which was his primary focus and passion for his thirty-seven years there. He developed a reference herbarium that included over 2000 plants as he worked to determine the diet of rabbits.

Korschgen continued to work in retirement and conducted comprehensive genealogical research on his and his wife's ancestors. He then wrote five books detailing his research. He also spent time traveling extensively, and continued his passions for gardening, foraging, hunting and fishing. He was not forgotten by the conservation community either; in 2011, he received the prestigious Master Conservationist Award from the Missouri Department of Conservation.

Leroy Korschgen passed away on January 9, 2015, survived by his three children. He will always be remembered as an influential and accomplished wildlife research biologist.

Series

The records are organized into the following series:

Illustrations, 1976-1983

Photographs, 1970-1978

Publications, 1980-2005

Illustrations, 1976-1983

Extent: 4.8 cubic ft. (12 Hollinger boxes); 0.001 cubic ft. (partial slide box)

Arrangement: Numerical

Scope and Content

Thousands of illustrations made on vellum of microscopic histological characteristics of leaf structures of Missouri plants by artists Shirley M. Abbott and Laura T. Bergin. Many of the drawings were reprinted in the reports in the Publications Series in this collection.

Each drawing was assigned a number, either by Korschgen (which is presumed) or the artist; there are a limited number of drawings with no designated number. The drawings are undated, but presumed to have been made between 1976 and 1983, the dates of the Federal Aid Project. Slides 1-11 may duplicate the vellum drawings.

See the Excel spreadsheet appended to the end of this finding aid for an item-by-item listing.

Extent: 19.4 cubic ft. of prints (48 Hollinger boxes and 1 partial), 2.5 cubic ft. of 35mm negatives (10 Negative boxes)

Arrangement: By format, then numerical by Korschgen's designated number

Scope and Content

Korschgen practiced histology, which is the study of microscopic structures, chemical compositions and functions of tissue systems. This series contains over 11,600 individual prints and 11,500 negatives, all of Missouri plants.

The photos are in sets according to Korschgen's arrangement, and each set is assigned a number. The sets average two to six prints each. The prints, which are black and white and measure 3.5"x5", are glued or taped to paper and labeled with the species name and the assigned set number. Most of the 35mm black and white negative strips also have set numbers with them. In comparing the set numbers of negatives with the prints, some seem to correspond directly, others do not. There is no index to the negatives.

See the Excel spreadsheet appended to the end of this finding aid for an item-by-item listing of the prints only. The set number range at the end of the Contents field is not necessarily inclusive.

	15	1	Letter from Marion H. Gray, Mississippi State University Department of Wildlife & Fisheries Research Associate, to Leroy J. Korschgen with list of photos he made from Korschgen's slides. Folder includes copies of the 36 black and white prints, 3.5"x5" each.	05/15/1980

Publications, 1980-2005

Extent: 0.4 cubic ft. (1 Hollinger box and 2 partial Hollinger boxes, 1 CD)

Arrangement: Chronological

Scope and Content

Korschgen's primary project for the MDC was to research plant histology of Missouri plants with regard to wildlife food habits to fulfill requirements in the Federal Aid in Wildlife Restoration Act (P-R Project No. W-13-R-24). The original version is in the form of 10 bound volumes containing 1,827 pages, all of which are included here.

From the Foreword to the compiled report on CD:

“The purpose of this study (initiated July 1, 1976) was to document and present by illustration the microscopic histological characteristics of the leaf structures of Missouri plants (limited to the Subclass Monocotyledons and Dicotyledons – Cryptograms and Conifers excluded) as an aid in wildlife food habit studies. The ultimate goal was to provide a means for identification of plant fragments or whole plants based on histological features. The project continued through a 6-year period to include essentially all Missouri plants botanically classified by Steyermark (1963) as Monocotyledons or Dicotyledons.” (p. 2)

An access copy of the CD is available in Reference.
