Historical and Biographical Notes

The Missouri v. Jenkins court case spanned 1977 through 1999 and detailed the struggle to desegregate the public-school system in Kansas City, Missouri. Over the course of the nearly 30-year legal battle, the case would go before the U.S. Supreme Court multiple times and become the focus of what legal authority a court could impose on a state. The case can be considered the closing bookend of school desegregation lawsuits which began with Brown v. Topeka Board of Education (1954).

Due to preexisting housing ordinances (maintained despite of the Shelley v. Kraemer (1948) ruling voiding housing ordinances based on race), both Kansas City, Missouri Public Schools (KCMSD) and St. Louis Public Schools (SLPS) remained highly segregated after the 1954 Brown v. Topeka Board of Education ruling that schools could not be segregated by race. In 1975, the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) completed a multiyear study of KCMSD. HEW concluded that KCMSD was illegally segregated. That same year KCMSD submitted a desegregation plan to HEW, which rejected the plan. In 1976, Administrative Law Judge Rollie D. Thedford reviewed the plan and ruled that KCMSD was illegally segregated. This ruling led KCMSD to implement a bussing program where children were transferred to other schools within the district to ensure all schools had a minority presence. Previously, boundaries maintained de facto desegregation and many new schools were built in predominantly African-American neighborhoods when less crowded “white” schools could have accepted more students.

In 1977, KCMSD filed a lawsuit, School District of Kansas City, Missouri et al. v. Missouri et al., in the federal U.S. District Court, Western District of Missouri against five Kansas and thirteen Missouri suburban school districts and their superintendents, the states of Missouri and Kansas and their governors and state boards of education, and the three involved federal agencies: the U.S. Departments of Transportation, Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and HEW. The state of Kansas and the Kansas suburban schools were included in the lawsuit for two reasons: KCMSD’s inability to expand their boundaries by law into Kansas and existing interstate cooperating agreements between districts in the two states, including a joint vocational education center. Within Missouri, KCMSD was also unable to expand its boundaries by law and wished for more cooperation between all metropolitan districts.

KCMSD’s legal claim stemmed from two issues it alleged were due to state laws: unlawful segregation within the school district, predominantly due to segregated housing ordinances, and the district’s inability to expand its boundaries. KCMSD felt that the best remedy was a multi-state metropolitan plan rather than a district plan to desegregate schools.

The trial began in 1978. U.S. District Judge Russell Clark dismissed the state of Kansas and the Kansas school districts from the lawsuit because all evidence showed that issues causing discrimination in Kansas occurred entirely within the borders of Kansas and that Kansas had no oversight in Missouri. Clark also felt the KCMSD school board had already done a disservice to its students and could not properly represent the students’ best interests. He reversed KCMSD’s role from plaintiff to defendant and ordered a new plaintiff named within 60 days. KCMSD filed a cross-claim against the state of Missouri saying the segregation was the fault of the State’s inaction.

In 1979, Arthur Benson II filed the required revised lawsuit naming a group of 35 schoolchildren as plaintiffs in addition to the Jenkins children who remained from the original filing and listed KCMSD and 13 suburban districts in the Kansas City Metropolitan Area as defendants. This filing became Missouri, et. al. v. Jenkins, et al. which proceeded through the court system for the next twenty years.

Governor Christopher S. Bond signed Executive Order 83-14 in November, 1983 to create the Metropolitan Desegregation Task Force (also known as the Desegregation Monitoring Committee). The Task Force was formed to oversee the desegregation process in KCMSD and SLPS and included the Missouri Attorney General, State Auditor, State Treasurer, Commissioner of Education, and the Commissioner of Administration.

By 1984, Judge Clark had dismissed the 13 suburban schools and the U.S. Department of Education from the lawsuit. The trial began on June 13, 1984 and ran until the final ruling on September 17. The court held both KCMSD and the State of Missouri liable for segregated schools, and dismissed the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development from the lawsuit. The court ruled KCMSD had to develop a plan to remedy the segregation, but left the wording vague and open to interpretation.

KCMSD's answer to Judge Clark's ruling, the Capital Improvement Plan and Long-Range Magnet School Plan, were approved by the Western District Court in 1985 and 1986, respectively. The Capital Improvement Plan provided state funds to upgrade existing schools and build new buildings. The Long-Range Magnet School Plan's goal was to create topical schools, including ones for science, performing arts, and foreign languages, that students would compete to enter from both within and outside KCMSD.

Approval of KCMSD's Long Range Capital Improvement Plan followed in 1987. The goal was to renovate 55 buildings and build 17 new school buildings, mostly for the magnet schools. As part of funding this plan, Judge Clark ordered a 1.5% income tax on income earners and $4 property tax rate on employees and property owners working and living in KCMSD to raise needed funds. In 1988, Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the income tax surcharge as being outside the federal court's powers. This ruling was appealed to the United States Supreme Court. In 1990, The Supreme Court upheld the increase of taxes without a taxpayer vote.

The state of Missouri asked the federal courts for a tax levy to help pay for KCMSD's share of desegregation costs in 1990. The state subsequently quit paying its share in May, 1991. The Eight Circuit Court ordered resumption of payments by the state in November, 1991.

After the 1993 disapproval of the 10-Year Long Range Magnet Plan, the courts ordered the State to meet with the school districts originally named in the suit to develop an interdistrict transfer plan, and ruled the state of Missouri was responsible for all administrative costs. This led to the second U. S. Supreme Court case in 1995 in which the Court ruled that Missouri exceeded their authority by ordering an interdistrict remedy for an intradistrict problem.

After the Missouri vs. Jenkins (1995) ruling, the state of Missouri and KCMUSD made a tentative agreement to find ways to end state funding for desegregation by 2000. Negotiations stalled in October 1995, forcing the Missouri Attorney General’s office to file a motion for enforcement of the Supreme Court’s ruling. In 1997 a Unitary Status hearing on KCMUSD was held, leading to the creation of a Unitary Status Plan. This plan covered the final capital improvement projects, created a security plan, and modified the accounting methodology. In 1999, Judge Dean Wipple dismissed the case.

Additional problems impacting the desegregation plan, both proceeding and throughout the court case, were conditions and compensation for KCMUSD Staff. The teachers’ union went on strike twice, first in 1974 and again in 1977. The 1974 strike was due to three factors: lack of educational programs, staff pay, and severely overcrowded classrooms. The latter may have been in part due to bussing in students from predominately white neighborhoods. This particular strike turned violent as cars near the schools were vandalized and objects on school grounds were set ablaze. During the 1977 strike, 500 non-tenured striking teachers were fired and all schools were guarded by police despite holding no students during the strike. In 1992, the federal courts approved new salary sanctions for teachers after recommendations by the Desegregation Monitoring Committee. By the time the case ended, KCMUSD was the nation’s second most expensive school desegregation program after the St. Louis Public School’s program.

This collection contains records directly related to the court case, including court orders, transcripts, and other legal documents. These documents came from KCMUSD’s second set of lawyers, Spencer-Fane. Microfilm reels C35535-C35546 are from Spencer-Fane while reels C31256-31270 are suspected to be images of the papers from Blackwell, Sanders, Matheny, Weary, and Lombardi.

Timeline

Year	Event
1954	In Brown vs. the Topeka Board of Education the U.S. Supreme Court case ruled segregated schools are unequal.
1975	The federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare ruled that Kansas City schools were illegally segregated. A desegregation plan was requested. That plan was subsequently rejected and sent to an administrative law judge in a hearing that began on December 8.
1976	Administrative Law Judge Rollie D. Thedford ruled the district was illegally segregated on January 16.

Year	Event
1977	KCMSD approved a busing plan to eliminate all-white districts, but most districts would remain mostly black. KCMSD sued 5 Kansas and 11 Missouri suburban districts, the states of Kansas and Missouri, and 3 federal agencies (U.S. Departments of Transportation, Education, Health, and Welfare (HEW) and Housing and Urban Development) in the U.S. District Court, Western District of Missouri to ask suburban districts be included in the plans.
1978	US. District Judge Russell Clark dismissed the state of Kansas and Kansas school districts from the lawsuit and reversed KCMSD's role from plaintiff to defendant due to conflicts of interest.
1979	KCMSD filed a cross-claim with the Western Court of Missouri against the State of Missouri and its role in the desegregation process.
1979	Attorney Arthur Benson II filed a revised lawsuit naming a group of schoolchildren as plaintiffs and listed KCMSD and 13 suburban districts in the Kansas City Metropolitan Area as defendants. This became Jenkins v. State of Missouri .
1983	In June, Judge Clark dismissed the Belton and Raymore-Peculiar School Districts and the U.S. Department of Transportation from the lawsuit. Federal trial began on October 31.
1983	Governor Christopher S. Bond signed Executive Order No. 83-14 on November 1, creating the Metropolitan Desegregation Task Force to monitor desegregation of KCMSD and St. Louis Public Schools.
1984	Judge Clark dismissed the 11 remaining suburban school districts and the U.S. Department of Education from the lawsuit. Federal trial began on June 13. A September 17 ruling declared KCMSD and Missouri as liable for segregated schools. The judge also dismissed the case against the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.
1985	KCMSD Capital Improvement Plan implemented after judicial approval on June 14.
1986	KCMSD's Long-Range Magnet School Plan was approved on November 12. A December 5 ruling by the U.S. Court of Appeals Eight Circuit Court changed the funding for desegregation to 50% cost to each the State of Missouri and KCMSD.
1987	On September 15 the Court approved the KCMSD Long Range Capital Improvement Plan to renovate 55 buildings and build 17 new schools. The Court also ordered a 1.5% income tax on income earners and $4 property tax rate on employees and property owners working and living in KCMSD to raise needed funds.
1988	In August, the Eighth Circuit Court reversed the income tax surcharge as being outside the federal court's power.
1990	On April 8, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the increase in property taxes without a taxpayer vote.
1990	The Voluntary Interdistrict Transfer Plan was approved by the federal courts on September 4 with the State of Missouri playing all costs for 10 students to attend Missouri City School District.

Year	Event
1990	In November, the State of Missouri requested a tax levy raise in KCMSD to help pay the district's share of desegregation costs.
1991	Federal courts denied the State of Missouri's request for the tax levy increase for KCMSD on January 24.
1991	Federal court denied voluntary interdistrict transfer plans for Independence and North Kansas City School Districts on May 24.
1991	In May, Missouri stopped making capital payments to KCMSD.
1991	On November 24, Eighth Circuit Court ruled the State of Missouri's interpretation of the financial cap was unfounded and ordered the state to make payments.
1992	On February 7, federal courts approved salary sanctions recommended by the Desegregation Monitoring Committee.
1992	KCMSD filed a 10-Year Long Range Magnet Plan on September 1 that would cost over $550 million.
1993	On January 4, the State was ordered to meet with the original 11 suburban school districts and develop a voluntary interdistrict transfer plan by April 30. On January 7, the court ruled the State of Missouri is responsible for all desegregation administrative costs.
1993	10-Year Long Range Magnet Plan was denied by the court on April 16 and KCMSD was ordered to create a long-term financial plan.
1994	KCMSD's Foreign Language Middle School was approved on April 14, followed by the approval of an early childhood program on July 19.
1995	U.S. Supreme Court ruled federal courts in Missouri exceeded their authority by ordering an interdistrict remedy for an intradistrict problem.
1995	On June 30, the State of Missouri and KCMSD made a tentative agreement to end state funding by FY2000. Negotiations broke off by October 26 when the Missouri Attorney General's Office filed a motion for enforcement of the U.S. Supreme Court's June ruling.
1996	The Kansas City Voluntary Interdistrict Transfer Plan was ordered phased out on March 7.
1997	A hearing on KCMSD's Unitary Status was held from January 13-31, leading to a Unitary Status Plan.

Scope and Content

This series is organized into subject files and appendices containing court documents, such as court orders, briefs, and exhibits. These are numbered consecutively, sometimes in multiple volumes. Other information from the original folders that is unique to each is included in the contents field below. Unique information will state at which level of the federal court system each set of files pertains to, however contents of the files could have come from higher or lower court level in preceding hearings. The first item in each volume contains a list of the included items and their individual filing date. Date ranges in the below columns will reflect the entire file. Items are filed within the subject files in reverse chronological order. If multiple volumes are used for a subject file, the list is in the first folder of the first volume.

Each file at the U.S. Western District of Missouri Eighth Circuit Court-level contains the client number “56865” and lists the client as “Kansas City MO School.” The legal staff that compiled the volumes also assigned each folder the subject number of “2.” Exceptions to this rule that do not have a contents list include 8th Circuit Court Volumes R(8) and R(19). In addition, the following 8th Circuit Court volumes are missing: R(18), R(23), R(25), and R(30). Transfer paperwork indicates these volumes were not offered to the Missouri State Archives for either microfilming or retention because the files were considered too large to transport.

Missing items from the U.S. Eighth Court of Appeals level include: 94-3274 WMKC Supplemental Joint Appendix Volume 4 and 94-1405 WMKC Joint Appendix Volumes 1 and 2. This set of records was not organized in the same manner as the court levels above and below the appeals level.

For the U.S. Supreme Court Level files, each file contains the client number “56865” and lists the client as “Kansas City MO School.” There is no index for Volume A(4). One document from tab 58 in Volume A(5) was on fax paper and appeared blank and was discarded; however, this item may be available on microfilm.
