Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Section 128.020 of the Revised Missouri Statutes is hereby repealed, and sections 128.346 and 128.348 are amended, to read as follows:

[128.020. When any new apportionment shall be made of the members to be elected to the house of representatives of the United States, whereby the number of electors to which this state may be entitled shall be increased or diminished, it shall be the duty of the governor to lay off the state into as many districts as shall be equal to the number of electors to which this state shall then be entitled, so that the said districts contain, as near as may be, an equal number of inhabitants.]

128.346. The districts established by the provisions of sections 128.400 to 128.440 for the election of representatives to the Congress of the United States shall be effective beginning with election to the 108th Congress and through the election of the 112th Congress. The districts established by sections 128.451 to 128.458 for the election of representatives to the Congress of the United States shall be effective beginning with the election to the 113th Congress. Effective beginning with the election of representatives to the 116th Congress, representatives to the Congress of the United States shall be elected at large, in the manner prescribed by section 128.348.

128.348. 1. The state of Missouri is hereby divided into nine congressional districts. Effective with the election for the 113th Congress, the state of Missouri shall consist of eight congressional districts. The legal voters of each district shall elect one member of Congress of the United States. Effective beginning with the election for the 116th Congress, representatives to the Congress of the United States shall be elected at large.

2. A political party may nominate a total number of candidates equal to the number of electors (representatives) to which the state of Missouri is entitled.

3. Political parties are free to determine their candidates through a primary election, caucuses, a statewide party nominating convention, or a combination of caucuses and a statewide party nominating convention.

4. A primary election will be the default method for parties to select candidates. Should a political party determine that they will select candidates by caucuses, statewide party convention, or a combination of caucuses and a statewide party convention, a legally designated representative of the party will notify the secretary of state, in writing, of the method to be used, no later than the first day of April of an election year.

5. If a political party elects to use a primary election as the means of determining its candidates for the general election, all qualified candidates who file for said party's nominations will appear on the primary ballot for that party. Registered voters will be allowed to vote in one, and only one, party's primary election, and for one, and only one, candidate from that party.

6. An ordered list of candidates for each party, equal to the number of seats to which the state of Missouri is entitled to in a given Congress, will be placed on the ballot in the general election, biased on the number of votes received by each candidate in the primary election for each party.

7. Should a party elect to nominate candidates for the general election by means of caucuses and/or a statewide party convention, an ordered list of that party's candidates shall be filed with the secretary of state's office no less than 90 days before the general election date in election years.

8. To qualify for a place on the ballot, an independent candidate must present petitions signed by one-quarter of one percent of the legal votes cast for the sum of all candidates for the United States House of Representatives from Missouri in the general election last preceding. Said petitions must be delivered to the secretary of state no later than one hundred and twenty days before the general election.

9. The signatures on petitions submitted by independent candidates and political parties shall be subject to verification according to the procedures in the code of state regulations for independent candidate petitions in force at the time the petitions are submitted.

10. In each general election, each voter will cast a single vote for a political party, and its ordered list of candidates, or for an independent candidate for Congress appearing on the ballot, or a single write-in vote for a candidate not appearing on the ballot, having properly registered with the secretary of state as a write-in candidate.

10. Independent candidates appearing on the ballot in the general election will be considered, as a group, to constitute an ordered party list, based on the total number of votes for each independent candidate, for purposes of determining how many independent candidates will be designated as representatives based on results in the general election.

11. The number of representatives from each party, including independent candidates, will be based on the percentage of the total votes cast in the general election received by each party, or by independent candidates as a group. For as long as the state of Missouri is entitled to elect eight representatives to Congress, one seat will be awarded for each 12.5% of the total vote, rounded appropriately. Should the number of representatives to which the state of Missouri be entitled increase or decrease, the percentage required for each seat will be adjusted accordingly.
