Even though this article is directed at teachers engaging students in virtual learning, these 25 strategies can certainly be applied to virtual programming.
VIRTUAL BACKGROUNDS

• Using virtual backgrounds – use them as a theme for the program. Ask participants to add a virtual background that goes along with that day’s program, their favorite Manga character, favorite book cover, the list could be endless.

• Play I Spy with the backgrounds – name something in each participant’s background to “spy” – could be a 5 minute ice breaker

SCAVENGER HUNT

- Scavenger Hunt - goosechase - the free version allows up to three individual participants or three teams – or you can simply ask participants to find objects in their home and bring back to show the group. Mr. Hooker suggests creating categories rather than specific objects, for example instead of a toy cell phone ask for an object with numbers on it.

TRIVIA

- Live Quiz or Trivia - Crowdpurr - the free basic plan allows up to 20 participants.
- Kahoot! or Quizizz are options as well.
- Holiday Trivia Questions

FAMILY BAKING COMPETITION

- “Nailed It” style virtual baking competition
- Participants are given supplies to have ready (baked and cooled cake and ingredients for icing for example)
- Challenge is not revealed until the program
- Teams are given one hour to create
- Judges interact (virtually) with teams, watching, commenting, and asking questions.
- Pictures of completed challenge are posted on social media

Based on The Great Brookie Bake-Off (online) posted by Amanda Westfall to the Programming Librarian
Nailed It is a Netflix cooking competition. Amanda’s participants were told to have two to prepare two baked and cooled round layer cakes and to have ingredients for chocolate icing. No other details were given until the competition started.
Cut paper into 2.5 by 3.5 inch pieces (trading card size). Playing cards can be used as well. Include scraps of fabric, ribbon, stickers, magazine pages, scraps of patterned paper or other small pieces that could be attached to create a card. This would be a great project to use leftover craft supplies and scraps. Hold virtual program showing participants examples of finished ATCs, explaining the concept and process. Encourage participants to use their creations to trade (socially distanced of course), for gift enclosures, or to keep. The 2.5x3.5 in. size will fit inside a trading card holder.
